Upland school trustees OK principal's demotion

By DINAH ROSE

Upland School District trustees struck a bargain with Cabrillo Principal Oliver Soderberg Tuesday, sticking to their decision to reassign him to classroom duties but agreeing to pay him a principal's salary for one year.

The announcement, made at a regularly scheduled board meeting, was greeted by shouts of protest Copies of the night's agenda were thrown at trustees by some members of the crowd of more than 100 parent supporters of Soderberg.

Upland police officers responding to a call reportedly made by one of the district administrators in an effort to calm the crowd experienced no serious difficulty. No actual violence was reported.

The agreement between the board and Soderberg followed a 90-minute executive session — an hour longer than scheduled - between both parties and a representative of the Association of California School Administrators.

Soderberg left immediately after the private session, and said this morning that he had no comment on the compromise agreement

He has been principal of Cabrillo School for nine years

'My only regret is for the parents who devoted days and weeks of work on my behalf," he said. "Words are inadequate to express my thanks to

The controversial reassignment was first approved by the board in a 3-2 decision at its May 13 meeting. Trustees declined to discuss the exact nature of the demotion to classroom teacher, citing privacy laws, but did say the decision was largely based upon several years of performance evaluation.

During the last month, Soderberg consulted Gale Reynolds. professional standards executive for the Association of California School Administrators. Reynolds said he advised the principal on options available to him. The motion to reaffirm the reassignment followed a statement of board philosophy regarding discussion of personnel matters at public sessions by board President Dina Hunter.

The listed agenda item read reassignment of classroom teacher to principal of Cabrillo School," suggesting the trustees might reverse their earlier action in response to parent protests.

Parents calling for Soderberg's reinstatement as the school's principal have presented 604 letters signed by supporters. But after the agreement made in executive session Brandt moved that the original decision be upheld with the additional salary increase.

Soderberg will also work 28 days in an assigned administrative capacity in addition to the regular 180-day teacher's year.

After the board unanimously approved the motion by roll call vote, the crowd rose to its feet, shouting protests mixed with scattered boos

Hunter asked unruly persons to leave the auditorium so the meeting could continue and, after about 10 minutes, shut the door.

The angry group of supporters voiced the most objection to a lack of opportunity to address the board.

They have taken away our freedom of speech," said parent Jim Trautner. "They ignored all those parents and the month of work we've put in - yet they are supposed to represent us."

Bill Miller, who has served as spokesman for some of the parents, expressed his frustration:

It was a beautiful political coup. Now they (trustees) can't be recalled — all they did is 'work out an agreement' with Soderberg.

We just don't have a next step to take now. What can you do?'

Trautner, however, disagreed. We're going to look into the recall of all five board members," he said angrily. "If they won't listen to 600 parents, who will they listen

New 24-hour postal center will meet many needs

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

What happens when it's 10 p.m. Wednesday night and you realize you forgot to mail your dad that neat tie for Father's Day?

All the post offices in town are closed and you know tomorrow the lines will be snaking out the door. Besides, your day is already crammed full of appointments are you going to have to be late with the gift again this year?

No, thanks to a new 24-hour selfservice postal center in its first full week of operation at the Upland Post Office, 333 Arrow Highway.

First of its kind in the West End, the center is tucked in a corner of the post office all-night lobby. It offers two stamp machines with a variety of denominations, and a third which allows the buyer to from choose commemorative and collectors' stamps. There is also a change machine for those people who never have the right amount.

And for that Father's Day tie, a package scale automatically computes postage rates for different zip code areas. Although the Self-Service Postal Center - or SSPC as it is known to postal workers - officially opened last Friday, Postmaster Tony Scalise said customers have yet to learn that it's there and what it can

The SSPC not only helps out people who need to mail something after-hours, but it can take the place of up to two window clerks when we're open," he said.

He pointed over toward a moderate line by the window clerks

"I would guess at least threequarters of those people could transact their business here at the center, and be out in five minutes."

On the first and second of the month, post office employees distribute food stamps, and Scalise said the crowd often trails out the door and down the street. But, he said, what regular postal customers don't usually realize, all those people are in a special line, and there are always the window clerks and now the SSPC - to serve postal customers.

The SSPC can provide all window services except Express Mail. foreign parcels, money orders. registered and certified letters.

Rudy Guzman, a postal employee for 19 years, took a week-long course to learn how to care for the new addition, and has been placed in charge of the center.

They took a "roller coaster" ride over a dirt road to the beach, and crowded into a Mexican-style disco on Saturday night. There Michele defied the noise and caught up on her sleep.

The evening of the great steak dinner was cold, and the meal served outside, but diners found something else to warm them up.

John Shoemaker, one of the adult members of the group, recalled spearing a whole forkful of what looked like green beans. He found out a searing mouthful later that the "beans" were actually a fiery chile.

In talking with the local city government, McCarthy found his Mexican counterpart dedicated and

Staff Writer

Proposals to expand the West End's water distribution system during the next five years at a cost of more than $25 million were unveiled this week.

Chino Mayor Larry Walker, a member of the joint powers authority which is planning the expansion program, says the water supply of the Chino Basin Municipal Water District is not enough to take care of the anticipated growth of the area.

"For the past several years we (the West End water users) have been taking more water out of the basin than the rains could replenish," he explained. "For years we have had to replenish the water supply with imported water. But if the valley's growth continues at its present rate, we won't be able to accommodate the new resi-

Every community in the West End, including Chino, Montclair, Upland, Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga and the unincorporated territories are affected by the dwindling

According to a report submitted to the Chino City Council this week by Ray Wellington, director of the city's public works department, new water will be a "firm necessity" in the next three to five years, and a "firm plan of action will have to be formed this summer" to avert a water shortage.

The report suggests three possible courses of action: - Construction of an import line from the La Verne treatment plant of the Metropolitan Water District to the - Construction of the West End's own treatment plant, probably in Upland;

- Joint participation with the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District in the construction of a treatment plant on the Miramar site in Claremont.

In all three cases, the West End cities would have to build transmission lines from the treatment plant to the present system, and Roger Brett, a member of the authority's planning committee, estimated that would cost between $20 and $25 million.

Brett said the joint powers authority felt about half of that money could be obtained from grants and loans from the state Department of Water Resources. He estimated that it would take 36 to 42 months to build the system.

"As we replace the surface water of the Chino Basin with import water, particularly from the Colorado River, we run into a higher degree of impurity, especially salt," he explained. "In a very short time we may be in violation of state quality standards.

That problem became apparent several years ago when water users in the West End discovered they were pumping out more water than the basin could replenish. Twenty-two water users, including the cities, water companies and individuals, then got together and apportioned the available supply, agreeing that if they went past their allotments, they would replenish them with import wa-

However, it was later discovered that even the best blend of import water, 60 percent from Northern California and 40 percent from the Colorado, was delivering excessive impurities into the system, necessitating further

All that was before the West End's unexpected recent growth spurt. Not only is the import water lower in quality than what the local wells supply but the Chino basin now also finds its distribution system is too small to accommodate the additional population

According to Wellington's report, the joint powers authority is now hard at work studying the three alternatives, and expects to make a recommendation to the member agencies in July or August.

Population estimate for area in 1990 up 90,000

This water sprinkler on Euclid Avenue appears to have a mind of its own as it gurgles away Tuesday morning, looking more like an ice

About 90,000 more people than originally anticipated for 1990 will be living in San Bernardino County's West End communities, Fourth District Supervisor Robert O. Townsend said this week as he requested regional planning authorities to modify their population forecasts

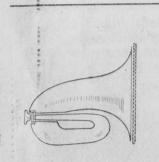

Townsend is an alternate to the Southern California Association of Governments executive committee.

Townsend, after attending a SCAG workshop last week, said changes are needed in the public housing, employment and land use forecast which consists of population projections to the year 2000. Current projects for the area consisting of such West End communities as Chino Hills, Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario and Fontana indicate a population of 445,900 by 1990.

These projections should be increased to 535,000, judging by the current trends," Townsend said in a report to the Board of Supervisors. The year 2000 projection should be increased by the same proportion to a population of 590,000.

These projections are critical to our county,' Townsend said, "as they are used to determine the needs and allocation of federal funds to implement the four major areawide plans concerning air quality, water quality, transportation and housing.

This means that the allocations of federal money to construct sewers in the West End are tied to these figures, as well as assistance for low and moderate income housing money and transit funds.

Host a Japanese student this summer

By LINDA BERGSTEDT Panorama Editor

Local residents will have the opportunity this summer to share their family lives with Japanese students who will be in Ontario for a three-week period.

The local community will be host from July 28 through Aug. 13 to 35 Japanese students and their studentcounselors through the Summer in America program of the American Institute of Foreign Study.

Pat Kaufman of Ontario, local coordinator for the AIFS program, is looking for local families who would like to share their homes with these students.

'The AIFS program is organized to maximize the host family's enjoyment and pleasure in their guest," she said. "All bus fares and entrance fees are pre-paid by the

Mrs. Kaufman has arranged several outings and allday excursions for the students while they are here in the West End. In addition, students will participate daily in a morning program of English classes

The host family of a Japanese student is asked to provide room and board and to share normal family activities with the visiting student.

'The idea is for them to see how we live," Mrs. Kaufman explained. "Entertainment is not a part of this We would like for the host families to share their normal, everyday activities with the students. If they play Monopoly, barbecue in the backyard or go shopping,

"They'd love to do what you do and that's important,"

In order to participate, families do not have to have a private room for the visiting student. "Just a bed and a towel are all that are necessary," Mrs. Kaufman said.

The Japanese students will have meals with their host families, and the families are encouraged to take part in any of the planned activities for the visiting group. One day, Mrs. Kaufman has planned an all-day tour that will include viewing movie stars' homes in Beverly Hills and seeing a television show taped in Hollywood. Another tour, one featuring local spots, will include visits to Ontario City Hall, Grabers' Olive House and

Trips also are planned to an Angels baseball game, the San Bernardino County Museum in Redlands and Ontario

Motor Speedway. There also will be a full weekend in San The stay will conclude with a "sayonara" party to which all host families and their relatives will be invited. The visiting students will range in age from 13 to 18 will be accompanied by teacher-counselors who have total control over them 'They all speak English,' Mrs. Kaufman said, "some

CARE worker shocked by Asian refugees

By ROBERT ESTILL Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - John Johnston is no stranger to poverty, disease, starvation and death.

In 16 years with CARE, Johnson has served in India, Sierra Leone and Greece before his current assignment as European director for the international aid and development organization.

But nothing in his background prepared him for the plight of Cambodian refugees at jungle camps in Thailand near the Cambodian border

"I have never seen anything as bad as I saw on that border." Johnston said. Many of the refugees do not make it to the camps. Starved and fatigued, they "just plunk down in the bush and stay there," unless they have relatives who can carry them in or they are found by Thai patrols, Johnston

Those that do make it to the camps arrive with only the clothes on their backs - and body lice, malaria, dysentery, respiratory ailments and malnutrition.

They are examined by doctors who write prescriptions in ink on their patients' arms. Those who are able to function are given medication and food, mainly rice and dry fish, to prepare for themselves. Those who cannot fend for themselves are placed in crude field hospitals formed from tree limbs and plastic

At one jungle camp with more than 30,000 refugees, 600 patients were lying on the ground in three long rows,

Johnston said. Many of the patients, primarily children, were so dehydrated they could not swallow. They have to be fed liquid vitamins and saline solutions intravenously or with an eyedropper. For those who recuperate, it is three to four months before they can again eat solid foods.

As many as 20 of every 100 Cambodians who cross the border in flight from the Vietnamese army have to be hospitalized, Johnston said.

In the jungle camps near the border, 40 people die every day. In the semi-permanent camps 30 miles from the border, the death rate has been reduced to eight a affected for the rest of their lives as a result of what they have experienced these last several years.

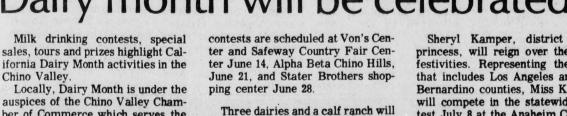

As a result of protein deficiencies, their energy level and physical size will be stunted, Johnston said. The medical researchers do not agree on whether intellectual loss as a result of the deficiencies will be temporary or permanent. The numbers keep increasing beyond the capability of the international relief organizations. There were about 200,000 Cambodian refugees in Thailand when Johnston was there in late October, but they are pouring across the border at the rate of 10,000 a day. CARE presently is feeding about 10,000 "special cases" - children suffering second and third degree malnutrition and pregnant and lactating women and is providing some medical assistance. It has exhausted a supply of 6,000 CARE packages containing clothing, soap, towels, a comb and mirror, all packaged in a pail. CARE hopes to raise $5 million for Cambodian refugees in the next year and already has spent $377,000 on medical support and feeding programs.

Those plans call for Dairy Bonanza Days contests, featuring a $100 dairy certificate and other weekly prizes, according to Brent Hunter, Center at 11 a.m. Saturday. Other ranches which include the J. N. Albers Dairy on Eucalyptus Avenue, the Hank Bauma Dairy on Kimball Avenue, the Henry Sterk Dairy on Chino Avenue and the G & G Cattle Co. on South Euclid Avenue.

World tensions stir new attention to teachings of Islam

By RITA GILLMON Copley News Service

Islam, the youngest and in the West the least understood of the world's major religions, has caught the attention of the world with tensions in the Middle East, Soviet troops and unrest in Afghanistan, and a revolutionary government in Iran.

The political turmoil, though partly fueled by Islamic religious sentiments, is not any more the direct result of Islamic teaching than the medieval crusades were the direct result of Christian teachings. Islam does not have a formal creed like most Christian churches. Instead, there are the "Pillars of the Faith:" the Shabada, or confession, "There is no God but God and Mohammed is His prophet," prayer five times daily while facing Mecca, charitable giving, fasting during the daylight hours of the month of Ramadan, and the pilgrimage to Mecca at least once if possible.

The resurgence of Islam in countries that had been adopting Western technology and economic practices is seen as retrograde or reactionary by many in the West, but Moslem scholars say Islam is compatible with technological advance or industrial development. What many Moslems object to, however, are the evils associated with modernization: the breakdown of the family, the lowering of moral standards, and the appeal of easygoing, secular lifestyles.

Islam began in the seventh century A.D. when Mohammed had a vision of the Angel Gabriel who dictated to him the Koran, the sacred book of Moslems. In addition to the Koran, Moslems follow the Sunna, or traditions of Islam, which are embodied in the Hadith, the actions and sayings of the prophet.

Moslems also study the Hebrew scriptures, which they consider to be testimony to God's prophets, Moses and Abraham. They regard Jesus as a great prophet. Though they believe in Jesus' birth from a purified virgin, they do not beleve he is God since that would, they believe, disturb the unity of God.

Moslems call Jews and Christians the "People of the Book" and respect their traditions, though they believe they are in error

Jila Zandian, a woman student from Iran, said people who talk to her about her religion ask the wrong

They ask why women are kept down. That is not a teaching of Islam, but a cultural thing which the prophet was always trying to overcome," she said. "In Iran women have to be respected.' Zandian is studying engineering at San Diego State University and has two sisters in Iran, one a dentist and

Solitary life affected lives of all manking

From Montclair Ministerial Association

Nearly two thousand years ago, the most unique man in all history was born in the small town of Bethlehem of Judea. His foster father was a carpenter; his mother, a peasant. He worked as a carpenter until he was thirty. For three years he was an itinerant preacher.

He never went to college. He never held an office. He never wrote a book. He never traveled over two hundred miles from his place of birth. He never did a thing that is usually associated with greatness

Yet, today, there are over a billion people in the world who are adherent members of His church. It has been said that of all the kings that ever reigned, none affected the life of man, as did this one life.

What made the life of Jesus Christ so unique? Moses, David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Micah — all prophesied his birth, life and death. An angel appeared to Mary, his mother. Three times angels appeared to his foster father Joseph, to instruct regarding the miraculous birth - and a need for protecting the child.

Angels also appeared to shepherds to announce the birth of this special child. Wise men from the east traveled hundreds of miles to see the "Newborn King of the Jews." They said, "We have seen his star, in the east, and have come to worship him.

Only the four Gospels - Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John - provide a record of the life of Christ. Matthew and Luke record accounts of his birth. Luke alludes to his childhood in these words: "And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast, and when they started home to Nazareth, they missed him." The parents returned to Jerusalem and three days later, found him in the temple, sitting among teachers of the law, discussing profound questions with them, amazing all, with his understanding and answers.

When Jesus was thirty, John was baptizing at Bethany, beyond Jordan. John recognized Jesus and said: "Behold the Lamb of God." Jesus began his ministry by going into the wilderness and fasting for forty days. Luke said: 'Then Jesus returned to Galilee, full of the Holy Spirit's power." Everyone praised his sermons in the synagogues: Nearly forty demonstrative "sign" miracles wrought by Christ, are recorded in the Gospels. However, these, selected by the writers, were from a much greater number. John says, "Many other signs truly did Jesus, in the presence of his disciples which are not written in this book.

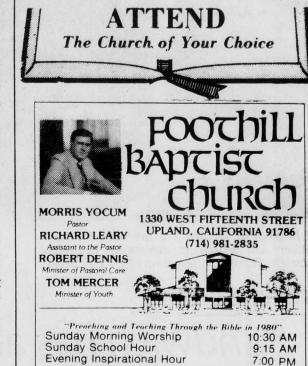

Jesus was known as a great teacher. Matthew said: He taught them as one having authority, and not as a scribe." His teachings was revolutionary to the traditions of his day. These teachings said: "Love your

San Dimas Press; LaVerne Leader; The Bulletin; Upland News; Rancho Cucamonga Times; Montclair Tribune neighbor, hate your enemy." Jesus said, "Love your enemies. Pray for them that persecute you.

> Dr. Raymond Cramer, a noted psychologist, made a study of the psychological approach to an understanding of the problems of human behavior and growth. Dr. Cramer said, "This study caused me to re-examine the teachings of Jesus - and helped to grasp, to some extent, his psychology of unlocking the human personality." He further states, "I was surprised to find professional people in all walks of life and, particularly, the psychiatrist and the psychologist, recognizing the adequacy of the teaching of Jesus, to provide a basis upon which the human personality could move towards the goal of true maturity.'

> To many people around the world, Jesus Christ is the son of God. John said, "Before anything else existed there was Christ, with God. He has always been alive and is himself God. He created everything there is. Nothing exists that he did not make. Eternal life is in him, and this life gives light to all mankind.

> There are many different schools of thought about Jesus Christ - and his life. Most will agree that no one has affected the world as has this solitary life.

Raisin English muffins are the base for this delicious and nourishing whole-meal luncheon sandwich. There isn't any time of the day when sandwiches aren't good eating - and that includes breakfast. Change your routine and have a sandwich to start the day.

Breakfast, too

Sandwich has all-day appeal

It used to be that sandwiches were only found at the mid-day meal. But lately people have discovered that sandwiches can offer economy, nutrition, time-saving and versatility to breakfast and dinner as well.

Yes, even breakfast! A slice of raisin toast, topped with cheese and fresh fruit can be a delicious eye opener. And for active people, the sandwich has become a revitilizing snack that can be "sandwiched" in between activities to accommodate the busy schedule.

No longer, however, should a sandwich be limited to ham and cheese on white bread. The possible combinations of fillings are limitless and the selection of breads in today's super-market offers a variety of flavors, colors and textures. The variety breads available are as numerous as the ingredients that can be pocketed between the slices.

Variety breads come in many shapes and sizes that appeal to the consumer's individual tastes and preferences. And many offer flavorful ingredients, such as raisins. Raisin bread is second to wheat bread in popularity among consumers.. And now, we're finding raisins giving English muffins a new flavor lift.

Here, raisin English muffins add an interesting flavor and texture to a nourishing whole-meal sandwich. Raisin Muffin Chicken Bombay features slices of chicken, layered atop split toasted muffins, and topped with a piquant curry sauce.

Garnished with apple slices and cherry tomatoes, this hot sandwich is a perfect luncheon or supper repast and can be prepared in a moment's notice when you have convenient raisin English muffins on hand.

Aging changes bodies

Life's passages are responsible for more than emotional upheaval - they can also contribute to weight gain in both men and women, according to the California Dietetic Association (CDA). Marriage, pregnancy and menopause all appear to contribute to the addition of extra pounds in women, according to a recent article in Nutrition and the MD.

In men, change in body weight has been reported during the decade from 20 to 30. Marriage, prompting a sudden change in eating habits and a subsequent reduction in physical activity, coupled with work changes, is the probable cause for the male weight gain during this period.

But unwanted pounds can be avoided," says Ann Coulston, RD, president of CDA "Moderate and consistent exercise coupled with a moderate diet based on the four food groups milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals,

VACCINATIONS FOR YOUR CAT

The most important vaccination for your cat is against feline distemper, also called feline enteritis or panleucopenia. The disease is highly contagious between cats and frequently fatal. The symptoms are high fever with vomiting and diarrhea.

When vaccinating against distemper we usually include a vaccination for upper respiratory disease (more specifically, rhinotracheitis and calici viruses). Signs of these diseases are discharges from the nose and eyes with sneezing accompanied by a high fever and occasionally ulcers in the mouth. In addition, some owners also prefer having their cats protected against rabies

We vaccinate cats against distemper and upper respiratory diseases at 6-8 weeks of age, with a booster at 12-13 weeks, and re-vaccinate annually. Rabies vaccine is given after 5 months of age, and in cats is repeated annually. The cost for vaccination is: feline distemper, $7.50 feline distemper with upper respiratory, $10.00; rables vaccine, $7.50.

My entire life has been a constant struggle to gain weight. I go on weight gain diets that never last for more than a few days. I simply get disgusted and then lazy and go right back to my poor eating habits.

I've discussed my problem with my doctor, but he offered no help. He said my little finger is healthier than his whole body and that all I need to do is eat more. He made me feel like I was wasting his time and that I should come back when I had a real problem.

Where do I go? Who can I talk to? I know I need a routine of good eating habits, but I need help in establishing them. -J.M.

Dear J.M.: I understand your problem very well, and I know it is just as important for you to gain weight as it is for people who are trying to lose. Strangely, the two opposite sides of the coin are quite similar, often beginning in early childhood. They both reflect damaging eating habits, and sometimes medical problems.

If you will follow these directions sincerely for the next 12 weeks, I think you will gain some weight.

'Horse people' fight annexation by city

"We are horse people. Please leave us alone."

The single sentence was scrawled in pencil across the front of a survey mailed back to the city of Montclair by a resident living on county land south of the city limits.

Surveys mailed to residents in the sphere of influence were one of a series of recent city actions designed to gather information about such issues as housing tracts, sewer capacity, park development and horse trails.

But no matter the intent, county residents treated the survey with the same suspicion they treat all other city projects promoted in the area.

Their suspicion is justified, they say. When the city of Montclair shows an interest in them, they say, it signals one thing — annexation. They say only by staying alert can they prevent the city from annexing them.

To Montclair, one of the smallest cities in the county, annexation means more land for expansion. To county residents, it spells the loss of their farm animals and rural life.

Montclair officials take issue with the statement, however. They say their actions are designed to plan future residential and commercial development according to the wishes of the county residents.

"It's a misconception that people will lose their rural lots or their farm animals," said Rosalie Staudenmayer, a city associate planner.

Residents moved to the county area because of its rural atmosphere, she said, and they want to keep it that way. "But we can't deny other property owners the right to develop or sell."

develop or sell."

Earlier confusion over development was the result of conflicts between separate city and county general plans, Staudenmayer said. Both zoning and land-use designations are now consistent under a joint general plan.

Firms can no longer play one set of development standards against another, since both the city and county planning departments are coordinating their efforts, she said.

Despite these assurances, "We do not want our way of life messed up by big money developers or well-meaning planning departments." Richard Ricklefs, a ounty resident, wrote on his survey.

He repeated these comments and his neighbors echoed them at a recent informal meeting of county residents held at Gary Crockett's halfacre ranch home, on Howard Street across from Mission School.

City officials can't be trusted, said Crockett, a lineman for Pacific Telephone. Montclair has purposely confused county residents and even deliberately lied to them, he said.

Montclair knows only too well how strongly county residents feel about annexation. A city meeting held at Ramona School four years ago to discuss the issue was effectively disrupted by about 250 residents.

An annexation policy for the county area was developed at a City Council meeting in May 1979. County residents were just as strongly opposed to it but were a little less strident when stating so.

The City Council's approved annexation policy helped clarify the city's actions, said Mayor Harold Hayes. The policy calls for the city to aggressively annex undeveloped land but leave established areas alone.

Hayes has repeatedly told county residents, "We don't want to change their lifestyles. But every time we have a meeting, people down there get concerned and think it's another annexation move. They go in resisting annexation and are sometimes blinded to anything else.".

But every time 32-year resident Audra Lewis attends a city meeting, "We just seem to be going over it all again and again. We try but the city has really hurt itself."

Even today, county residents say city officials continuously schedule meetings, start projects, rezone property and annex land without properly notifying them.

For these reasons, "We're all flatly opposed to Montclair. They haven't told people here the truth," said Mike Peters, a county resident. "I've lived here all my life and I know what I'm talking about."

County residents are so opposed to Montclair that if they can't remain on county land they would rather annex to Chino, Ontario, Pomona — anything but Montclair.

In fact, county residents would sooner annex to hell than Montclair, added Jerry Ronnie, a county resident and a professional farrier (blacksmith).

"If we could, we'd like to secede from Montclair and join Ontario's sphere," said the 55-year-old Ronnie. "We feel our interests would better be served there than in Ontario. Montclair may not have any use for animals, but we intend to keep what we have."

To understand why county residents feel the way they do, the calendar must be turned back 25 years, before Montclair became a city in 1956, said Hayes, who has been a member of the City Council for more than two decades.

"The controversy over annexation goes clear back to the time of incorporation, when the first city boundaries went down to Phillips Boulevard, and included the sphere

"We wanted to do it — include that county land in the new city," Hayes said, "but the Kadota Tract was the most densely populated area and that's where the opposition started."

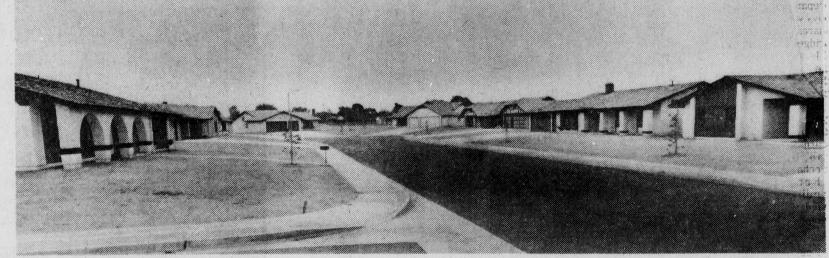

County residents living in the area west of Pipe Line Avenue "are predominately older, established, disdainful of city living," Hayes said. "They like the rural atmosphere, with the open land and the farm ani-

When the county Board of Supervisors reviewed boundaries for the new city, "that group strongly protested at the meeting, saying annexation would raise their property taxes," Hayes said.

The protest was successful, he added. Supervisors moved the city's southern boundary from Phillips Boulevard north to State Street, a designation that continues to exist today.

The county land south of Montclair provides an interesting contrast between city and rural life. At right, Santiago Barella, a 26-year-old resident of the area, carefully hoes weeds among rows of corn, as new houses can be seen in the background. Below, half-acre ranch homes suitable for keeping horses can be found on Rodeo Avenue near Stagecoach Avenue.

Currently, the city of Montclair generally includes the land from the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad tracks above Arrow Highway south to State and from Mills Avenue east to Benson Avenue.

The city's zone of influence has been defined by the county Local Agency Formation Committee (LAFCO) as county land from State south to Phillips and from East End Avenue east to Benson.

Just as residents feared, property taxes increased when the city was incorporated, Hayes admitted. But since property tax limits were imposed by Proposition 13, "that fear has been liquidated."

The fears may well be gone, but the controversy isn't. City officials and county residents have been at odds over the issue of annexation ever since incorporation.

Over the years, Montclair has annexed county land little by little, generally when a property owner requested such an action for the purpose of gaining access to city sewers. Staudenmayer said.

But county residents are still wary. The city's recent action to annex 100 acres of land between Mission and Phillips boulevards and Fremont and Vernon avenues is another example of the "divide and conquer" game being played by the city, said Ronnie, a county resident for 20 years.

But the city is listening to county residents, Staudenmayer insisted. Most residential developments recently approved for the area have been specifically required to offer lots and trails suitable for horses.

Still, the conviction of the residents can't be ignored, city officials say. "As an old rancher myself, I support the idea," Hayes said. "If I lived down there I probably would resist change, too. But I've resigned myself to the fact that things do change."

Barbara Wagner, a county resident, also has recognized that fact. That's why she became an ex-officio member of the city Planning Commission — with the power to vote on issues related to growth in the county area.

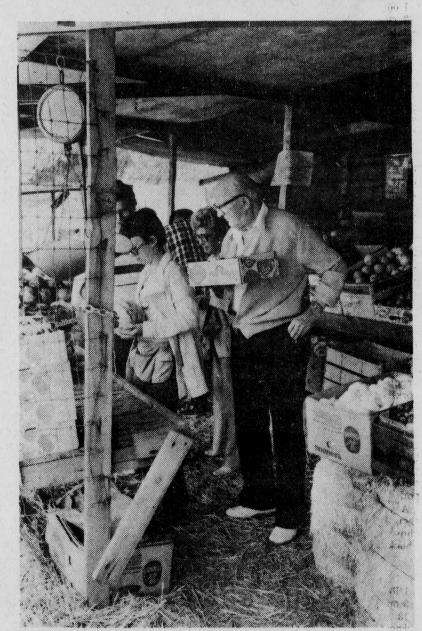

While the sounds of automobile traffic and roosters crowing mixed incongruously outside her home, Wagner noted, "You have to be realistic. The area won't stay dairy farms and orange groves forever."

Rather than fight with the city, Wagner said, county residents should become involved and exercise their power to ensure their land stays the way they want it.

Although his attachment to the county area is just as strong as that of his neighbors, he says he sometimes feels displeased with the way they act. "People who have resentment ... what have they accomplished? All their looking out for is themselves," the poultry rancher said

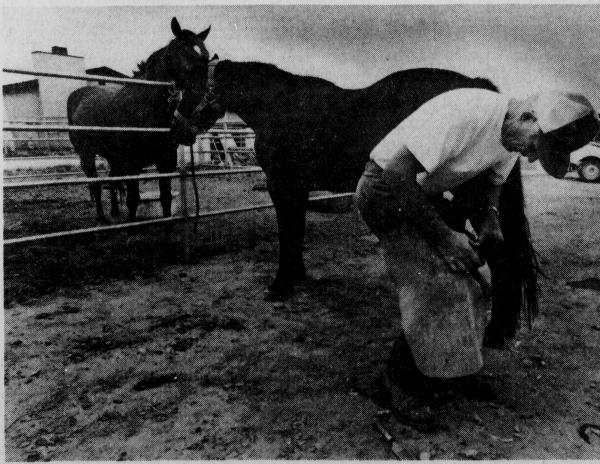

Bizzle says he supports annexation because it's the best way for local residents to maintain local control. "The county (government) doesn't know what's going on around here. Getting them to help is like finding a needle in a haystack," he said.

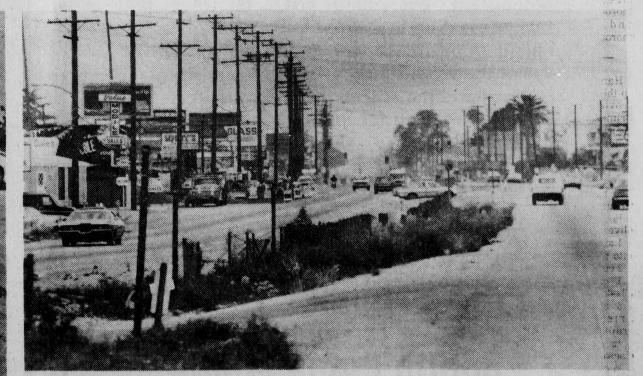

Wagner, however, opposes annexation. But she says she wants a hand in ensuring a rural atmosphere for the county area if annexation ever becomes a reality. "You don't get the opportunity very often to create the kind of environment you want. That's what we've got here."

Although farm land in Montclair's county area is fast disappearing, there are still enough crops harvested to keep this Mission Boulevard fruit stand well stocked. A drive through residential streets provides glimpses of corn rows, strawberry fields and watermelon patches.

At left is one of the most outspoken residents against annexation, Jerry Ronnie, a farrier (blacksmith) who takes his job seriously. Above, a major east-west route for Montclair is Mission Boulevard, located on county land. The street has been the cause of much controversy. The county is technically responsible for its appearance, but, has been criticized for making little effort to clean it up, much to the displeasure of local businessmen.
